This turkey hunt went, surprisingly, according to plan!

The big tom never made a sound. I first saw him as he walked along the fenceline over 100 yards away, heading toward a crossing point. He was the largest tom I had ever seen. He disappeared behind some brush, and I took the opportunity to get into a steady shooting position, shouldering my shotgun, placing my elbow on a lateral branch I had tested the evening before, and supporting the forend on my raised left knee. I could stay in this position indefinitely, and only slight movement would be necessary to aim at a target anywhere across my front. I had barely settled in when he reappeared, now 80 yards away. He took one look at the hen and jake decoy setup 20 yards in front of me, went into strut, and marched across the field to within 10 yards of the pair. He crossed back and forth, all in full strut. Finally, he stopped and faced me. My Beretta Onyx roared and, at 29 yards, the 3-1/2 inch load of #6’s literally knocked him over. I jumped up and walked quickly to him, but there was no question of the outcome. As I stood over him, amazed at his size and appreciating the beauty of the day, I glanced at my watch. It was 8:05 am.

Like most of the obsessive hunting fraternity, I like to make a plan prior to the actual hunt. It is often detailed, and is based on the physical conditions of the hunt and the cumulative experience of the hunter. The fact that the hunt seldom goes as planned does not dissuade me from making a plan, quite the opposite – it helps me expand the plan for additional variables. The problem is, in my 25-plus years of hunting turkeys in Texas, spring turkey stubbornly refuse to conform to my extremely reasonable plans. If I do not bust them off the roost attempting to ease into position, they approach from my off-side, refuse to announce their presence, sneak in from behind, hang up out of range, run off with a real hen or just ignore me despite my entreaties. Or, I could set up poorly, move too much, or just flat blow the shot. But, every once in a while, things go according to plan – just like I drew them up on paper.

I headed out to the land on Friday afternoon. The outline of the plan was simple – locate a roosted tom this evening, call it in and kill it in the morning. The problem is the details – where to set up, where will the tom appear, how to get it within range, how to get in position to make the shot without spooking it, and how to work the problem when a tom does something unexpected. I choose the creek bottom – a possible...

Building Lifetime Relationships Through Financial Solutions
Advocacy - A Critical Part of Our Mission

By John Patterson

The promotion and protection of the rights and interests of hunters worldwide is one of the three components of Dallas Safari Club’s mission. DSC dedicates a significant portion of its grants budget each year to organizations and firms across the globe in the position to exert influence in these areas. Recently, the DSC sent a delegation to Washington, D.C. This year, the DSC contingent consisted of myself, Executive Director Ben Carter, DSC events coordinator Ben Kimmel, President Elect Chris Hudson, DSC PAC Chairman Lance Phillips and DSC’s media coordinator Steve Wagner.

Thanks to the efforts of Lance and our Washington lobbyist, Glenn LeMunyon, we had very productive meetings with members of the Texas congressional delegation as well as representatives from a number of other states. Glenn keeps us informed of issues and proposed legislation affecting hunting and sportsmen’s rights, and is a very effective voice on the hill for DSC. Hot topics are the potential up-listing of the African lion by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, resurrecting a bundle of bills known as the Sportsman’s Act, and changes to the bi-partisan Congressional Sportsman’s Caucus (CSC) — nearly 300 members of Congress. CSC also works at the state level with governors and legislators. Our delegation attended a reception where the keynote speaker was Sally Jewell, the newly appointed Secretary of the Department of the Interior. Later in the annual CSF banquet.

As members, you can rest assured that the grant dollars directed towards Glenn LeMunyon and the Congressional Sportsman’s Foundation (CSF) are well spent. The work that Glenn and the CSF do on behalf of our sportsmen and women is vital to making our voices heard and protecting our interests.

In the interest of space, I could not list all that we met with during our trip. I must mention DSC Life member Rep. Pete Sessions (R-Texas). Rep. Sessions was most generous with his time and we would like to thank him for his staunch support of the rights of sportsmen and women.

roosting or strutting area. Unfortunately, it can be difficult to get into position without disturbing them depending on where they decide to roost—so I headed down early. I went to the two-acre stretch at the edge of the land. It was green but the growth was short, which made it an excellent strutting area. I found a downed cedar with an excellent field of view. I sat down, and continued to plan. I confirmed the field of fire, checked for cover in the event a turkey sneaked in from behind, removed all leaves from where I would be sitting to minimize noise, and cleared all twigs and small branches that might interfere with the movement of my shotgun. I practiced getting into a shooting position and confirmed I could take a comfortable position and hold it for an extended period of time.

The next part of the plan was how to best guarantee the tom would come within shooting range. I decided to use a jake and hen decoy set-up 20 yards in front of me. My Onyx has taken a turkey at 50 yards, so even if a tom hung up beyond the decoys, I would still be in a good position. My perfect set-up would only work if a turkey roosted beyond the food plot. If they roosted behind me, the topography of the place would prevent me from getting to this spot without spooking them, and I would have to set up at the other end of the creek bottom. I had to find out if a tom was going to roost in the creek bottom tonight, and where. Finally, right at dark, a tom gobbled—far enough into the woods that I would not spook him setting up. The plan continued.

Early Saturday morning, I snuck in, placed the decoys at the pre-determined location, and settled in at the downed cedar. I didn’t have much cover in front, so it was imperative that I see the turkey first and get in a good shooting position without being seen. I focused my attention on the fenceline at the far end of the field. If the tom circled, or if another tom approached from behind, I was counting on the cedar providing enough cover to allow me to locate it and shift around. Now, the next phase of the plan kicked in—would he gobble, when should I start calling, and how should I call? I was carrying my two favorite calls. My box call is my all-purpose call, my mouth call is the “closer.” The wind picked up as the darkness grudgingly gave way to morning. Wind means the toms are much less likely to gobble and hens to yelp. I would need to be even more vigilant in seeing the tom first. I decided to go with the box call, not too loud, not too often, and not too fired up. The plan was to let the tom know that at least one hen was hanging out in the field, and if he was looking for a date, he ought to swing by. Once he got to the field, the plan was for him to see his girlfriend being courted by a jake, and for him to step in and take over. The last part of the plan was for me to take the shot at an appropriate time, at an appropriate distance, and not blow it when I did. It all happened, for once, just like on paper.
Can you feel it? It’s in the air! Sure, deer season is underway and I wish all hunters success in the field.

But, more importantly, there is a particular crackle when you set foot into any place where more than two or three Dallas Safari Club members are gathered – a regional meeting, the DSC Headquarters, a club event such as the Trophy Room Tour. You don’t even have to look at the calendar to know we are getting closer and closer to that day when everyone will start showing up, and the show is on!

There is one more DSC 100 meeting, Dec. 5 at DSC Headquarters, and I hope everyone who wants to volunteer or even just get more information will attend. The committee chairs are reporting a good response so far, but we cannot slack off. This year’s show is shaping up to be the best of the best EVER in the history of Dallas Safari Club.

As your Convention Chair, I want you do know that I have consulted with the weather powers-that-be and the weather is ALL FIXED. It’s a done deal. Things will be bright and perfect for our show. Of course, in the event of slightly less than perfect, our volunteers are ready for anything and will pull off a great show, no matter what the circumstances.

Thanks again to all the volunteers, committee chairs, auction donors, and all those DSC members who go the extra mile to make the show and the club as great as they can be.
“Ah’ey! Dis wan’s gotta crawdad in his gut making ‘em all kinds a’ cranky!”

Huh. Hadn’t heard that one before.

Butch continues spinning his Cajun colloquialisms as he struggles to pull the 1,000-pound test line and the monster attached to it from the chocolate-colored water. A black-scaled head explodes from the soup. Jaws open. Teeth glistening.

“Dat crawdad must be dancing in dere! Gator PO’ed a might fierce! Shoot ‘em quick!”

I lean over the edge of the shallow boat, level the pistol behind the swamp dragon’s boney head and fire. The .22 pops. One pair of Russell Moccasin boots down; only a belt, cigar humidor, and handbag to go.

Just as meat doesn’t grow at the supermarket, nor do high-end alligator and other exotic skin products magically appear at Neiman Marcus. They’re handcrafted by skilled artisans utilizing the best in exotic leathers.

Today, a handful of companies still carry on the tradition of turning hunter-taken skins into custom works. Russell Moccasin, a DSC exhibitor, and Walden & Bork, owned by DSC Life Member Richard Sanders, are two. It was Richard who suggested we do a proper leather hunt for alligators in the bayous of Louisiana. We were accompanied by Richard’s cousin and future DSC member – I pushed him real hard into joining the entire weekend – U.S. Army Maj. Joel Anderson.

Our guide was DSC Member Butch Bernard who along with his crew of five had more combined gator hunting experience than one should brag about. Butch led us into the waters surrounding Bateman Island upon the Atchafalaya River early on a late August Saturday. The weather was typical of Louisiana and gator hunting – hot and humid. When we left the dock at 8 a.m., the mercury was already dancing some zydeco up the thermometer just past 80 degrees. Fortunately for Richard, Joel, and me, Butch and crew had baited a mess of hooks with rotting chicken throughout the Bateman waters the night previous. All we had to do was check them. And check them we did. At 8:30, our first hook produced a nasty tempered seven-foot lizard. “The perfect size,” said Richard Sanders. “A six- to eight-foot alligator will produce the best leather as the size of their belly scales are small enough to be molded into almost anything. Anything over eight feet, and the scale size will be too big for shoes and smaller items.”
The first gator was followed by another and then another and another. We were landing one gator for every three hooks. The luggage was piling up fast. Despite their ill-reputed temperament and super protected noggins, alligators are relatively easy to kill. A well-placed .22 will do the trick – if you have any ammo. “Took me a week to get two bricks of hollow points,” Butch said referring to the nation’s ammo shortage. “If I hadn’t found what I did, y’all might have been hunting dese gators with a knife.” Uh, you might have been, Butch. I’m not that brave…. nor that dumb.

By noon, we had 36 gators and three very overweighted boats. We picked up some additional weight in the form of a twelve-pound Asian carp. This invasive species jumped from the boat’s wake – as they tend to do, slamming me to the deck with a big wet slimy fish kiss.

And all morning I had thought it was a gator that would get me. 🐊

Through an historic collaboration between governments, one hunter will have a chance to hunt a black rhino, help manage and conserve the species, and import a rare trophy to the U.S. in 2014.

Dallas Safari Club has been selected by the Government of the Republic of Namibia to auction a special hunting permit with all proceeds earmarked for rhino conservation in that country.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has promised full cooperation with a qualified buyer. DSC will sell the permit during its annual convention and expo Jan. 9-12 in Dallas. An unprecedented sale price is expected.

“This fundraiser is the first of its kind for an endangered species,” said DSC Executive Director Ben Carter, “and it’s going to generate a sum of money large enough to be enormously meaningful in Namibia’s fight to ensure the future of its black rhino populations.”

The Government of the Republic of Namibia approved the permit in accordance with CITES provisions to generate crucial funding for rhino conservation initiatives including anti-poaching efforts — while at the same time managing the black rhino population within Mangetti National Park, where the hunt will take place.

Science has shown that removing certain individual animals can help rhino populations grow.

Black rhinos commonly fight to the death. In fact, the species has the highest combat mortality rates of any mammal. Approximately 50 percent of males and 30 percent of females die from combat-related injuries. Extremely aggressive bulls are known to be population-limiting factors in some areas. Selectively harvesting these animals can lead to population increases and greater survival.

Rampant and indiscriminate poaching is threatening rhino populations across Africa. Rhino horn has high black-market value, especially in Southeast Asia, for ornamental uses and folk remedies, although medical research has disproved actual benefits.

The beneficiary of 100 percent of the proceeds of the permit sale price is the Namibia Game Products Trust Fund. Both DSC and contracted auctioneer Ed Phillips of Houston offered to forego their customary sales commissions to support the special cause.

Louisiana conservation attorney John J. Jackson, III, helped facilitate the auction item and proceeds will be channeled through his Conservation Force, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit public charity, for income tax deduction purposes.

The winning bidder may hire his or her qualified outfitter or guide to lead the hunt, and will be accompanied by Namibian wildlife officials.

Be sure to save the date for the DSC 100 volunteer meetings. What is this DSC 100, you may ask?

The DSC 100 has played a crucial role in the success of our annual convention throughout the years. This army of volunteers began with nearly 100, hence the name. However, over the years, it has grown to 500–600 volunteers who give 100 percent. Jobs range from bag stuffing to coffee and hospitality service to move-in/move-out and security. You name the job — there is a volunteer involved in it!

Why volunteer? You will make new friends, hang out with old ones and have the time of your life. You won’t believe how much fun countless hours of hard work can be until you do! Not available for more than a few hours? That’s ok — join us! There is room for all levels of energy, time and talent. If you are not sure, you can also just show up at a meeting where friendly committee chairs may fight over you. (It’s been known to happen!)

PLANNING A 2014 HUNT: SELECT THE RIGHT OUTFITTER

It's not too soon to begin planning hunts for 2014 and beyond. Dallas Safari Club is offering a three-part series of tips to help you get started choosing, finding and booking your next adventure of a lifetime.

Part 1 discussed preparing for the conventions. Advance work will help you decide on a specific type of hunt and begin finding potential outfitters. Once you've narrowed your search to two or three operators in the same price range, you'll be ready to attend the show and meet the outfitters personally.

Part 2: Selecting an Outfitter

It's important to interview and vet carefully, not because there are bad operators, but because not every hunt is perfect for every hunter. You know your tastes, preferences and abilities. Make sure you communicate those and ask questions to ensure a good fit. DSC maintains a code of ethics and standards for hunt operators within its membership. Any outfit exhibiting at the DSC show is a member in good standing.

Here are five tips to help you pick the right one.

1. Shop Wisely – Never book a hunt based solely on what an outfitter, guide or booking agent tells you. If you have an established relationship with an agent or operator, that's one thing. But don't plunk down thousands of dollars based on a brochure and sincere mannerisms. Make decisions based on informed research.

2. License Confirmation – Check to make sure your guide or outfitter is legal. For example, only a Zimbabwean registered PH (professional hunter) or safari operator can conduct hunts in Zimbabwe – no freelancers from outside may guide. Contact the wildlife department in the area you plan to hunt and ask how to check on your outfitter's status. Some states require formal licensing. Others require registration or membership in an association. Ask if there are any complaints on file against your operator.

3. Member Status – Seriously consider an operator who is a member of the local professional hunters association. These groups have stated codes of ethics and conduct by which their members must abide. While these groups may not be able to take legal action against violators, they can provide you with some recourse if anything goes awry. Several African PH associations exhibit at the DSC convention, so you might be able to talk to someone at the show who knows the reputation of your prospective outfitter.

4. References – Always ask operators for references and make sure you call them. Get references for the last three to five years, including last hunting season. This will give you a sense of the operator's performance over a long period, as well as a recent snapshot on what to expect. Ask for references that were successful on their hunts and some who were not. If an unsuccessful hunter still recommends an operator, that's a good sign.

5. Get Specific – Ask specific questions and do not accept general or ambiguous responses. If a reference tells you the guides are great, ask what makes them great. Ask about their personality in camp, skill at spotting and putting you on game, understanding of a bowhunter's special needs and ability to adapt to a client's capabilities. If they say there's plenty of game, ask about the actual numbers, species, quality animals, access, shot distances, etc. If they say the terrain is easy, do they mean it's easy for a fit 30-something or easy for a 70-year-old with two knee replacements? Get specifics. Watch for conflicting information from references and the outfitter.

OMNI SOLD OUT, MAKE RESERVATIONS NOW!

By Lynda Rexrode-Adams, Banquet and Registration Manager

Our host hotel at the Omni Dallas Convention Center, is fully booked. It is not anticipated that any rooms will be added to the block because it is truly booked. This is great news for Dallas Safari Club, showing the popularity and demand for our show.

However, some convention attendees who still haven't booked their rooms might be discouraged about this news.

We encourage everyone who wants a room to make their reservation just as soon as possible. There are hotels still available that are a short walk or shuttle ride from the Convention Center and the Omni. The easiest way to find rooms is through the Hotel Reservation link on www.biggame.org.

Please keep in mind that shuttle service from ALL listed hotels will be available during show hours, with additional service during the evening hours. A shuttle schedule will be available at check-in and in the convention program.

TRADER KEITH

Purveyor to the African Hunter

www.traderkeith.com • 800-338-3146
Generations from the youth hunter to the more seasoned outdoorsman or outdoorswoman, Dallas Safari Club has the auction item for each and every member of your family. Over the course of four days, there will be nightly Live Auctions on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a Live and Silent Auction during the Ladies Luncheon and Life Member Breakfast, and the outstanding Main Silent Auction in the Convention Hall. With each opportunity, bidders of any age or gender will be tempted with an amazing selection of items, including youth hunts in New Zealand and Texas, a challenging Mid-Asian ibex hunt in the Kyrgyzstan Republic, a bongo hunt in Cameroon, luxurious furs, exquisite jewelry and a fully catered luxury fishing trip aboard a 125-foot yacht in the Amazon, to name a few.

To follow are a listing of received donations valued at $500 or more. A complete listing of donated items will be on our website, www.biggame.org, and the all-inclusive Auction Catalog will be online and mailed to members late fall.

We invite you to support conservation, youth outdoor education and hunters’ advocacy through Dallas Safari Club’s Generations Auctions! Please feel free to contact me with any questions at lori@biggame.org or (972) 980-9800.

Happy Shopping! Lori Stanford, Auction Manager

The Higgins Branchini Shooting Foundation is hosting a single-day, two-event Quail Hunt Fundraiser to benefit collegiate shotgun shooters.

This year’s event is being held at Long Straw Ranch, a 400-acre licensed game preserve and hunting property in Forestburg, Texas.

Two complete quail hunts will be held — one in the morning, the other in the afternoon. Each hunt will consist of a maximum of twelve hunters afield, in three groups of four.

The cost is $750 per person, per hunt.

Entries include participation in the Quail Hunt, birds, guides, dogs, and bird cleaning. Lunch will be served on-site for all participants.

Beretta Gallery of Dallas is Lead Sponsor of this year’s fundraiser.

Raffle prizes will include items from Beretta and other event sponsors.

HBSF grants to collegiate shooters help offset the expenses of training and competition, providing greater opportunities for recipients to hone their skills and compete at venues that might otherwise be out of reach. In our first year, 31 shooters from across the country received grants; several of them went on to win national collegiate and international championships in 2013.

Proceeds go to the Higgins Branchini Shooting Foundation (a 501C3 charitable organization). Appropriate IRS documentation will be provided. For reservations or to learn more about our foundation’s ongoing mission, please visit the HBSF web site (www.HBSHootingFoundation.org) or contact Mike Higgins at 817-296-3104.

Third Quarter MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

MEMBERS ONLY

ENTER TO WIN!

To be eligible to win the prize, sponsor a DSC membership for friends, neighbors, family and co-workers. For each new member you sponsor, your name will be entered into a drawing for the 3rd quarter, October 1, 2013 to December 31, 2013.

The incentive for this membership drive is the Swarovski EL 42 10x42 Binocular, a value of $2,479 MSRP.

Redefining optical quality, the EL Swarovision 42 provides improved viewing comfort, and enables users to enjoy the entire wide-angle field of view and the new EL 42’s unique edge sharpness. Eyeglass-wearers also benefit from the full wide-angle field of view due to the large eye relief distance, and removable twist-in eyecups. This binocular has enhanced coatings for maximum color fidelity guarantee absolutely life-like color reproduction and outstanding image brightness, even at dusk. “Swaroclean” coating on external lens are applied so dirt, watermarks, etc. can be removed effortlessly.

DSC members support the important mission of education, conservation and hunter advocacy. They also reap the benefits such as discounts with certain merchants, the award-winning Game Trails, Camp Talk and a complimentary subscription to Lone Star Outdoor News, as well as the fellowship of other hunters at monthly meetings and a lovely welcome package including key chain, luggage tags and lapel pin.

For more information, contact the DSC office, (972) 980-9800, or email info@biggame.org.
